

Charlie Nardozzi

Charlie delights in making gardening information simple, easy, fun and accessible to everyone. His energy, exuberance, and love of the natural world also make him an exciting presenter. Charlie combines an in-depth knowledge of gardening and landscaping with hands-on organizational experience and communication skills to help your company find and create solutions to even the toughest gardening and landscaping challenges.

He is the former horticulturist and spokesperson for the National Gardening Association, and has worked on gardening programs with companies such as the Hilton Garden Inn, Stonyfield Yogurt, Cabot Cooperative, and Gardener's Supply Company. He has been involved in community and kids gardening programs in Vermont and across the country and is the former Chairman of the Board of the Burlington Area Community Gardens.

Bottom line: Charlie brings an experienced eye and a coach approach to individuals and companies who want to create a more wholesome, vibrant landscape. He excels at working with people side-by-side to teach the skills needed to grow their own food and flowers while inspiring them to live a healthier lifestyle.

"Very engaging, enthusiastic talk, helpful and practical. It opened a new avenue to me for how to landscape."
- Idaho Nursery and Landscape Association

"All the URI Master Gardeners attending last night's membership meeting raved about your excellent presentation!" - University of Rhode Island.
